

DIFFERENT WAYS TO EXERCISES AND ACTIVITIES TO IMPROVE
THE VOCABULARY OF B2 LEVEL STUDENTS BY READINGShermamatova Sevaraxon O'ktamovnaFergana State UniversityEnglish language and literature faculty, Applied English department, EFL teachersevaraxonshermamatova85@gmail.comQaxramonova Gulrux Dilshodbek qiziFergana State UniversityEnglish language and literature faculty, Third year studentgulruxqaxramonova@gmail.com*

ANNOTATION: The article talks about how learning new words is important for learning a language, and how reading helps with this. The students we picked are better at reading than usual. So we look closely at the exercises and tasks they do. In addition, we use reading exercises to help students have better vocabulary. This article looks at how reading activities can be used for learning in the 21st century.

KEY WORDS: lexicon, target dialect, actualizing, strategy, procedure, pass on, linguistic use, lexicon authority, competence, word, exercises, ways of actualizing.

Today, almost everyone needs to have a good level of English to be a professional in any job. This has made English one of the most important subjects in the world today. English teachers are now being recognized and respected for their skills. However, they are also being more closely evaluated, especially when it comes to how well they know the language. Most governments and schools are now making it mandatory for teachers to have an international exam certification to prove their English skills. This has caused problems for many English teaching communities worldwide. In many countries, changes have happened fast and without much planning. This has put a lot of pressure on teachers who are now required to show they are good at English, when they didn't have to before. Many teachers' English skills have gotten worse because they usually teach basic English. This means they don't get to use English much and can't keep up their skills. They learned English well in college but now it's getting worse. In the past, language programs for English teachers only required them to have a basic B1 level of English. But now, they need to have a higher level, at least B2, to keep their jobs. It's important for English teachers to not only keep their current level of English but also work on getting better. There are many ways for teachers to do this. The most common suggestions for learning a new language, like taking classes, talking to native speakers, or listening to music, often don't work well.

Here are some new ideas I have. Usually, teachers are given these things to help them deal with these problems. Here are some ways to improve learning difficulties. When teachers try to improve their English on their own, they usually don't succeed. They always find reasons why they are too busy or can't focus enough to just do it. If you plan to study by yourself, the first thing you need to do is make a schedule for studying every day and stick to it. Treat your study time with the same importance as going to work, the gym, or the supermarket. Don't make excuses, just study. If you can, find some teachers who are also struggling and study together. If you can't find a study group with people you know, you can try posting on your teacher's social media page to find other teachers in your area who want to study together. As the saying goes, "There is power in working together" and you will be more likely to succeed if you study with a group. Search online for websites that can help you get better at English. Set up a schedule to visit these sites and practice your skills for one hour, two or three times a week. Be strict about it, find a quiet place where you can study alone, and just do it. The best way to get better at English is to practice speaking and writing it regularly. Writing, like talking, is one of the main ways to communicate with others, and it's also a great way to improve your English skills. Many websites on the internet help beginner writers improve their skills. These websites let writers put their stories or poems into their own accounts they set up. When you put them on the website, everyone can read them and leave helpful comments. Both my smart students and the English teachers I have taught have found these websites to be a great place to show off their writing skills and get good feedback. Websites like crossword puzzles are great for practicing and improving reading, vocabulary, and comprehension skills. There are many websites with different crossword puzzles to choose from, ranging in difficulty. Other than websites for EFL and ESL students, there are also many websites for native speakers. These can be great for challenging teachers and advanced level students. Some good websites are: One thing I really enjoy is changing cartoons. Go to Google Images and look for cartoons. Remove the speech bubbles and describe what's happening in the pictures using your own words. This activity is great for practicing common or specific words, as well as for practicing phrasal verbs and idioms. When you want to find cartoon strips, try to find ones that have different scenes to tell a whole story. You can find good websites to improve your English, like www.npr.com and www.ted.com. These sites have real English conversations that you can listen to and read at the same time. This is a great way to practice two very important skills at the same time. Another great way to improve your advanced listening skills is by watching documentaries on YouTube, cable TV, or platforms like Netflix. A lot of teachers say that documentaries are too difficult to understand, or that they are boring and not interesting. Documentaries are really cool and you can learn a lot from them. They also help you improve your English skills. Don't forget, the more you listen, the better you will understand. Practicing a lot helps you get better at something. For some reason, many people think that reading is only about one skill. This is only true if you believe it. Reading helps people learn and grow in many different ways. Reading is very important in the education system of English-speaking countries. It helps students remember things better and learn without even realizing it. When you read, your brain learns how sentences are put together, common phrases, and the meaning of the words. It's hard to learn these things as well using other methods. Instead of just reading, how can we make reading more helpful for learning. One way is to make a memory system. While reading, make sure to remember all the new words you come across. After finishing each part in a big notebook, write the word, its kind, what it means, and then two or three sentences using the word in the story. After reading the chapter or passage, please write a review using as many of the new words as you can. (b) Make a video review with your phone. Use the words we learned about remembering things to make a video review for each part of the book or activity. This is a great way to see how well you speak by yourself or with a friend. Make a crossword puzzle. There are great websites like Discovery Education where you can make your own puzzles like crosswords and word searches. After each chapter or activity, make a crossword puzzle using the words you learned. It's also really important to have a good dictionary that gives you the right information when making a crossword puzzle. Later on, maybe 1 or 2 weeks later, get out the crossword puzzle and finish it to learn more words. On the internet, there are lots of websites that list random questions. Pick a good website, then use Google to find the answer to your questions. This is a great activity to get better at reading and learning in a fun and challenging way. Try to read out loud whenever you can. Reading out loud is good because: 1. It's 2It helps us connect the written and spoken words. 3It helps us learn new words. 4It helps us understand things better.

In conclusion, the exercises and activities mentioned earlier are the best ways to improve your vocabulary through reading. It's important for teachers to pick materials that are interesting, real, and match the students' level.

References

1. Harmer, Jeremy. The Practice of English Language Teaching (3rd ed.).
2. Essex: Pearson Education. 2001
3. Ur Penny. A Course in Language Teaching. –Cambridge: Cambridge
4. University Press, 1996
5. Hasanova Diloromhon, 2007. Teaching and learning English in Uzbekistan. English Today, 23 (1). P.p. 3-9.
6. Hasanova Diloromhon and Shadieva, Tatyana, 2008. Implementing Communicative Language Teaching in Uzbekistan. TESOL Quarterly, 42 (1). P.p.138-143

7. IrisqulovMirabbos et al., 2014. Kids' English 1. Students' Book. Tashkent. Uzbekistan.
8. AL Qahtani, M. (2015). The importance of vocabulary in language learning and how to be taught. International journal of teaching and education, 3(3), 21-34.
9. Collier, V. P. (1987). Age and rate of acquisition of second language for academic purposes. TESOL quarterly, 21(4), 617-641.
10. Ehrman, M., & Oxford, R. (1990). Adult language learning styles and strategies in an intensive training setting. The modern language journal, 74(3)